I have completed and copyrighted two of the three parts of the autopsy book, the other one, which deals with all 3 assassinations, and a 200,000 word addition to the later. However, none are available because I cannot get them printed. These copyrights are an effort to preserve my rights. There are other works I have already researched. My work is far from done. But reviews would do no good because the books cannot be bought. And thanks for the thoughtfulness of the return-addressed envelope. Also, not "new" address now two years old.

Only what appeared in the papers. Hogwash. She hoped for propaganda and probably was put up to it.

If Lane had made the same accurate comment about the authors he'd have been more complete. There is nothing in Six Second that does not originate elsewhere. Thompson manufactured a cop-out formula, hoping for a killing, and in the course of it, with the considerable exposure he got, lambasted the "critics", from whom he disassociated himself, the least he could do after having stolen so much. This is called "remaindering" and it will not be limited to one outlet. Hope not on Sylvia's excellent work, for the difference is in what she gets.

I am happy to say I've heard nothing of Lane in a long time. Sciembra said recently they hadn't heard from him in nine months.

P.S. Do you by any chance happen to have Mark Lane's address? I've lost track of him ever since he left N.O. last year.
